I bring beautiful designs to life.

Hi, I'm Abbi Aldrich, a front-end web developer based in Dallas. My journey into the tech world was inspired by a deep love of making things that work well. And that's exactly what I bring to coding - writing clean code that works. With a background in Education and Linguistics, I believe that communication is key to successful relationships with clients, users, and collaborators.

I take mockups and psd designs and bring them to life with HTML, CSS, and JS interactivity. First and foremost, I keep user experience at the heart of my work, finding creative solutions that can be used time and time again.

Check out projects I've worked on below.
